

Please keep the "Do Not Call" status as strong as it is. I was constantly being harassed by salespeople for a variety of different products, which I neither wanted or cared for. The only way I could stop this type of harassment was to either disconnect my phone, which meant none of my friends or family could contact me, or sign up for the DO NOT CALL LIST. Yes, you are correct, I opted for the DO NOT CALL LIST. Sometimes I still receive an occasional nuisance call, but when I advise them that I am on the DO NOT CALL LIST, they immediately hang up. I guess the thought of the FCC having the power to fine them $10,000 might discourage them from making the call to me. Please, do not weaken or remove the power of the DO NOT CALL Law in the state of New Jersey, but rather make all the other states as strong as ours. Maybe, telephone can then be used for the purpose intended, to communicate with friends and relatives, and not for advertisers to bother the public.

Thank you,

Angelo
